NEW ILLUSTRATED CHILDREN'S BOOK – AVAILABLE OCTOBER 2020

ROSA'S FOOTPRINT

Rosa's Footprint is based on a real trace fossil footprint of a pre-dinosaur reptile, from 240 million years ago, found in recent years preserved within rocks on Sidmouth beach.

Rosa is a young rauisuchian, disturbed by the mess other reptiles leave behind. In the present day, young paddleboarder Colin is dismayed by rubbish left on the beach. What he finds underneath it makes him think.

A story of environmental awareness that spans the shifting sands of time.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR JO EARLAM AND ILLUSTRATOR MARK HANNON

Jo is a former newspaper and BBC journalist. She has lived near Sidmouth for 30 years and was inspired to write this story by her passion for the outdoors and the spectacular Jurassic Coast on her doorstep in East Devon. The book is a tribute to her father Bernard, who encouraged her to value the natural world and treat it with care.

Mark, who's from Plymouth, has been involved in Art and Design throughout his life, being influenced by his art teacher father. He takes great care over the illustrations for children's stories, linking the pictures to the text to make it a fully immersive experience for young readers.
